The Benefits of Spaying/Neutering

Here are some benefits you and your dog/cat can expect when you have your dog/cat spayed or neutered:

Better health. A dog that is spayed or neutered has no chance of developing uterine or testicular cancer; in females, the risk of breast cancer and urinary infections is drastically reduced. Reproductive cancers are common among older dogs that have been bred. Neutered cats will be less likely to contract diseases such as FeLV and FIV, they will not be subject to testicular cancer, and will have decreased risk of mammary cancer. Spayed cats also have a decreased risk of mammary cancer as well as ovarian and uterine cancer.

Better behavior. Male dogs that are neutered when young are much less likely to roam, mark their territory (and your belongings) with urine, and show aggression toward other male dogs. Intact (unneutered) male dogs will go to great lengths to get to a female dog in heat—they will dig their way out of yards, break fences and leashes, and cross streets in heavy traffic if a female in heat is in the area. Neutered cats are less likely to spray strong urine, will lose the urge to fight, and will be less likely to try to escape.

Easier care. An unspayed female bleeds for about 10 straight days twice a year. She bleeds on your carpet, your furniture, the interior of your car, and on the ground outside. As soon as she has marked your yard, you can anticipate a constant parade of males who will pace your lawn, howl, and bark. You have a fenced yard? They will dig their way in.

No accidental pregnancies. If your cat/dog accidentally becomes pregnant, you will have to provide additional medical care (which is extremely expensive)—for her and the babies—and be responsible for finding good homes for half a dozen or more offspring.

Plus...it's the LAW.

On February 12, 2008, the City Council of Los Angeles gave final approval to a new law that requires all cats and dogs in the City to be spayed or neutered after the age of four months. The Mayor signed this ordinance on February 26, 2008, making Los Angeles the national leader in efforts to humanely decrease the number of pets abandoned and euthanized each year.
